Saving and Testing Changes to Preferences

Changes to preferences are set immediately (i.e. there is no save/cancel process as elsewhere in the software). Changes typically take effect when you close the Preferences module; however, you can force changes to take effect by clicking the Commit Updates button in the lower-left corner.

Many preferences are stored with a user's session at login. To test updates to these preferences, you must click the Re-Login button. This reloads your current session, implementing any updates made to the system.
